As a result of the shooting, his business affairs were in sound condition, as far as they knew, and they could assign no reason for attempted suicide.

SETTLE PARENTAGE OF ONE GREY MULE

Miles Fanning and Ed. Cribben Both Claimed Animal.—Justice Court Jury Gives It to Cribben.

The question of just who owned a certain tall and rangy gray mule which has been a perplexity for the town of Rock over the past ten months was settled in Solomonian fashion in Justice of the Peace Gardner Kaivale's court yesterday afternoon.

Nearly half a hundred residents interested in the fairly tall and lanky animal taxed the office to capacity.

Miles Fanning claimed the mule and so did Ed. Cribben. A jury composed of F. S. Winslow, L. G. Iman, Charles and Edward Connell and Hay Hayes finally gave it to Cribben after being out half an hour.

The testimony brought out something which may be of interest to raisers of mules—providing they did not know it heretofore. This was that a mule raised from the pail will be a better mule than the one raised from the mother.

Fanning, on May 2, 1915, bought pasture rights from Charles Kilmer, another town of Rock farmer. Early in June Cribben did the same.

Both placed mules in the pasture. One was as tall and rangy as the other. The small animal, scraggly and weak.

After several months arguments ensued as to which mule was the property of Fanning and which belonged to Cribben. Fanning stole a march and took the mule he claimed from the pasture.

Cribben got a writ of replevin. The suit started.

Because a witness testified that the mule claimed by Cribben upon being brought near its alleged mother, ran forward and from the first demonstrated a friendly spirit, Cribben was awarded the fairly tall and rangy gray mule.

Not Improbably.

A gentleman of a very excitable and emotional nature had the misfortune to lose his third wife. He took the affliction very much to heart and at the grave was so overcome that he fainted.

His friends gathered around him and were fearful for his life. Among them was a German who spoke English brokenly. He stooped down and felt the gentleman's pulse and looking up said: "He's all right; he'll re-wive."

leaves have given wonderful creations to science. Mineralogists show us wonderful leaf formations in the center of rocks that were formed so long ago that even scientists can not tell us just when. They are found hundreds of feet below the present surface strata of the earth when this globe was in its formation, showing that the Divine Power created the leaves for some specific purpose.

Stop and think of these facts before you clog your sewers with the refuse of the wonderful foliage that has sheltered you from the sun's rays in the summer heat and now in the wonderful glories of the autumn coloring is most resplendent. Put them to the use that nature designed or destroy them by fire, which consumes all and leaves nothing but dust and ashes.

THE SPADE A SPADE.

Governor Philipp does not mince words when he updates a spade. He is a sincere, earnest man, one of whom the majority of the voters of Wisconsin have reason to be justly proud of. He is a plain business man and he has brought business methods into Wisconsin political affairs. His administration has been constructive—not destructive—and the good that he has accomplished has worked wonders in the general tone of the business affairs of the state.

In his address at Waukesha the governor did not mince words when he stated his opponent did not hesitate to state half-truths in attempting to belittle the present administration. It is no new thing for the governor to face this situation and neither is a man with cold facts that can not be refuted.

The present gubernatorial campaign is evidently following closely along the lines of the progressive republican pre-primary campaign and one can see the finger marks of the progressive republican leaders in the bitter attacks that are being made upon Philipp. However, if the primary is any criterion, the voters of the state will repudiate this policy of attack by a rousing majority.

The state needs Philipp. The state needs a legislature in touch with his administrative policies and the two should go hand in hand in the selection of the republican administration of state government, for of course the state will go republican from Hughes down and on.

The entire state and legislative ticket should be elected by a rousing majority in this the republican year.

Wilson men are now saying that if the election was today their candidate would win but—? Perhaps that is true, but every day the campaign continues Hughes continues to gain ground and by November he will sweep this country like a genuine western cyclone, sweeping out all remnants of democracy.

Selection of a city attorney appears to be a troublesome business for the city commissioners. It is to be hoped, however, that when they make their selection they will name a man who is not afraid to act when it is necessary and is not tied down by any strings.

The special session of the legislature has given the soldiers "held for political purposes" on the Mexican border, the right to vote at the coming election without any serious delay.

The "Brown October Aie" and the genuine Octoberish weather to go with it seems to reach the right spot as an antidote to the summer's heat and worry.

The one question is whether after the war will the aviators take to driving aerial buses or continue to fly the air simply for recreation purposes.

DEMOCRATIC ASSEMBLY CANDIDATE DIES TODAY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Appleton, Oct. 11.—Colonel N. E. Morgan, democratic nominee for the assembly for the first district, died last night from a stroke of paralysis. Colonel Morgan was seventy-four years old and served both in the Civil and Spanish-American wars. During the revolutionary war, Colonel Morgan's ancestors fought with the Pennsylvania regiment against the English. Colonel Morgan was very prominent locally and during his life held many county offices.

The Daily Novelette

Simon Simons, the meanest man in Pritchburg, felt that it was really time to give his fiancée a treat. He sat in her parlor indulging in free handholds every night for three weeks now, and he simply must take her out. While he was having the opera house, he was decided by a brilliant idea. He inquired at the box office and was told that the house was sold out for the night, the biggest opera night in the history of the town.

"Oh, Lucile," he said to Miss Duds, "what do you think of the idea of taking in the show at the opera house tonight? Caruso's going to sing 'Flan,' and he's going to walk the tightrope. John McCormack's going to do a blackface turn with somebody named Al. McGlueck, and everything. I'm sure you'll be able to get a couple of nice seats for five dollars apiece, or maybe six, who do I care?"

After being coaxed for four-eighths of an hour, Miss Duds consented to go, and Simon Simons telephoned on Miss Duds' phone to the Fordalino auto agency, asking that a car be sent to Miss Duds' address to give a prospective purchaser a sample ride. They rode in style down to the opera house, only to be informed that not a seat was to be had for cash or money.

"Curse," said Simon Simons, vexedly. "Well, let's go to the movies."

But just then a well dressed man in a green derby stepped up with two tickets, explaining, "Glad to be able to help you out, partner. My grandmother's down with the old infantile paraly and I can't take her out as I expected. You can have these two five dollar tickets for what they cost."

Simon Simons paid, and then faintly revived the first act was over.

The New Stuff.

I listen to a nifty vood-vile team. As they let off their ragged rag-time steam.

I listen as they wilyly synopsize; The audience applauds and calls it great.

They do not sing the old songs any more.

The songs that had some music in the score.

They shout they yell, they wilyly paw the air.

Until I think it is some weird night-mare.

They do not really sing, they only talk.

To jerky minstrel strains and Castle walk.

They imitate the negro with a slang, The like of which no negro ever sang.

They twist, they turn, they dance upon their knees.

They make, they say, the trombone's thump, thump, thump, thump, thump.

It would indeed be quite a novelty To cut the fool stuff temporarily.

Ed like to hear, just once, I would, A song of two our grandmas used to sing.

Why Buy One.

"I started out to buy a car (his sprit) and the tall man at the end of the bar."

"Yes," said the short man with the fuzzy fedora. "Why not? You can afford it all right."

"I can afford to buy one all right," said the tall man, "but I don't have to. My wife and I can get all the riding and more than we want without putting up the $3,500. I have discovered a scheme whereby I can enjoy all of the benefits while the other fellow pays all the expenses. When I let it be noised around that I might buy a car, there were words of thirty automobile agents at my office in less than no time and each one wanted to take my wife and myself out riding. I picked out one and he chased me with every gun he had for two weeks. Then I let another one have his turn, then another, then another. We are riding all the time and every agent sticks to us about two weeks. I have got it figured out that there are enough agents in this town to last us until late this month, and then the riding season will be over and I won't really have to buy a car. I have got it figured out that there will be a new crop of agents in our midst. Why BUY a car?"

"Why, indeed?" repeated the short man. "Tomorrow morning, bright and early, I shall announce that I am about to buy a car. Thanks, old man."

High Cost of Toothpulling.

A surgeon, in illustrating the fact that some people object strenuously to paying a fair price for expert work, told the following.

An old farmer had an ulcerated root which gave him much trouble and he decided to have it out. He went to a cheap dentist who worked on him half the afternoon and extracted two teeth causing the old man excruciating pain.

The face ached harder than ever and the old man with fear tremor, bling entered the office of an expert dentist, a man who knew his business. The latter extracted the root which had caused all the trouble in the first place and did it in less than a minute.

"How much?" asked the old man.

"One dollar," replied the professional man.

"That's highway robbery," shrieked the old man. "That other dentist worked two hours, longer than you did and pulled two long teeth and he only charged a quarter."

The Daily Novelette

Simon Simons, the meanest man in Pritchburg, felt that it was really time to give his fiancée a treat. He sat in her parlor indulging in free handholds every night for three weeks now, and he simply must take her out. While he was having the opera house, he was decided by a brilliant idea. He inquired at the box office and was told that the house was sold out for the night, the biggest opera night in the history of the town.

"Oh, Lucile," he said to Miss Duds, "what do you think of the idea of taking in the show at the opera house tonight? Caruso's going to sing 'Flan,' and he's going to walk the tightrope. John McCormack's going to do a blackface turn with somebody named Al. McGlueck, and everything. I'm sure you'll be able to get a couple of nice seats for five dollars apiece, or maybe six, who do I care?"

After being coaxed for four-eighths of an hour, Miss Duds consented to go, and Simon Simons telephoned on Miss Duds' phone to the Fordalino auto agency, asking that a car be sent to Miss Duds' address to give a prospective purchaser a sample ride. HEATED DISCUSSIONS MARK DEBATE ON "HUGHES OR WILSON" BEFORE TWILIGHT CLUB.

ONE SURPRISE SPRUNG

A. E. Matheson Still in Doubt as to Whom to Support—Whitehead and Richardson for Hughes.

Heaping praise and criticism in turn upon the administration of President Woodrow Wilson, speakers favoring his re-election and speakers opposed to him and urging the election of Charles E. Hughes presented their arguments in a heated political debate Tuesday evening at the first meeting for the season of the Twilight Club.

John A. Aylward of Madison, United States District Attorney for the western Wisconsin district, led the discussion on the side of the president and Honorable Dent Atkinson of Montana, a speaker secured through the republican headquarters at Chicago, led the cause on Wilson's side, the administration especially for its policy with reference to Mexico and the Lusitania, which he characterized as "one of the nation's national honor, respect and dignity."

Following up the debate as it was stated by the speaker of the evening, several Janesville men took up the cudgels and entered into the argument with a vigor and decision that quite equalled that of the leaders. Honorable John A. Aylward delivered a strong indictment of the Wilson regime and made a plea for a return to republican policy in the interest of a sound and business administration, as well as a respectful consideration for dignity among the nations. Postmaster J. J. Cunningham grew eloquent in his praise of the administration and its policy, which he characterized as "one of the nation's national honor, respect and dignity."

Mr. Aylward declared that the Wilson regime was a "watchdog" policy in Mexico. The big sensation of the program was the surprise in store, and that was the admission of Alexander E. Matheson, Mr. Whitehead's law partner, that he was undecided as to which side to take. He said he would receive his vote normally he would be inclined toward Hughes, but when he found Mr. Hughes' principal supporter, Mr. Roosevelt, advocating the Wilson regime, he was forced to ask himself if it were not his duty to cast his vote in favor of Wilson.

The debate opened upon its record of achievement according to Mr. Aylward who mentioned a number of the laws enacted during the last three years. From the stand point of the laborer, the speaker mentioned laws which have effected his interests. He mentioned the child labor law, a measure promised time and again by the republican party in their platform but never placed on the statute books until a democratic administration put it there. The same fact was true of the workmen's compensation act which was advocated by President Wilson in his first address to congress. The eight-hour law was discussed by the republicans in '06, Mr. Aylward declared, and it remained for a democratic administration to give the postal employees an eight-hour day and the government employees in the district of Columbia an eight-hour day. And finally the democratic congress has passed the Adamson bill granting to railroad men engaged in interstate commerce an eight-hour day.

Mr. Aylward declared that the Adamson bill was not a raise in wages as the republicans had argued, but a measure to protect the workers. He said the bill was already at work on an investigation of the matter of arbitrating wage disputes. The matter of an eight-hour day, which was not a subject for legislation, Aylward called attention that any republican senator could have blocked the passage of the law since the proposal was considered by the senate was made a matter of unanimous consent.

Laure Farm Loan Law. "With regard to the farm loan law," said Mr. Aylward, "they have been patted on the back time and again in every campaign but there has been little done for them in the way of helping legislation. It remained for the Wilson administration to pass the farm loan law which will make it possible for farmers in the poorer and more backward sections of the country to secure capital at a reasonable rate of interest and for long terms. They may also get loans up to one-half the value of their property, and the law will allow the development of 45,000,000 acres of wild land in northern Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota.

Concluding his remarks, Mr. Aylward declared that he was a democrat and that he was not on his knees during the last four years of the presidency of one Roosevelt. He is the man who declared in his speech at Eau Claire that he would have confiscated every German ship in American harbors the morning after the Lusitania had been sunk, and at once he is the president who eight years ago said he did not want a larger army and navy and who is now attacking Wilson for unpardonable extravagance in the face of larger expenditures for the army and navy that were made during the whole eight years of Roosevelt's presidency.

Opening the argument for Hughes Mr. Atkinson, of Montana, declared he wished to congratulate his opponent on doing so much about nothing. "The democrats have been trying to keep a big nation in a trunk bed and were having a long time doing it," he declared. With reference to the democrats keeping their silence he asked if there wasn't something said in the Baltimore platform about one term for Wilson if he were elected, and something about canal tolls, neither of which had been kept.

With regard to the eight-hour day for railroad men, why had the law been enacted a year ago when the subject was up for discussion in congress he asked, instead of at a time when a few laboring men were holding up the government at the point of pistol. It was worse than lynch law. It was wrestling by force what should have come by persuasion and public sentiment.

With regard to the crisis with Germany in the sinking of the Lusitania Mr. Atkinson ventured the opinion that if Roosevelt had been president, the Lusitania would not have been sunk and the whole issue would have been handled before any untoward act had been committed. "Mr. Wilson kept the United States out of war and peace out of Mexico," declared Atkinson. "Roosevelt's war cost us less lives than Wilson's war cost us. And Wilson's war has been killed in Mexico, one hundred and seventy-five women have been shot down by bandits armed with machine guns, thanks to the lifting of the embargo on arms which was placed by Pres. Taft, and millions of dollars of American property has been confiscated or destroyed."

With regard to the Lusitania crisis Mr. Atkinson declared that it was no task for Wilson to keep the country out of war. There was no one who wanted war and there would have been no war if Roosevelt had been president but the situation would have been a different one. Instead of cowardly, sacrificing the honor and self-respect of the nation.

"True to the motto of today's prosperity as the result of the vast sums poured in by the allied governments, but in face of that the national treasury is a deficit of $200,000,000, while there was a surplus when the republicans went out, of $100,000,000. As a result of this huge deficit the democrats have had their hats out to the nation and they want the administration that has to take up a collection every Sunday like a Methodist camp meeting."

Mr. Atkinson pleaded for a change in administration which would uphold the dignity and honor of the United States. He urged the slogan sounded by Hughes, "America last, America first," and the slogan of "America last, America first."

J. J. Cunningham, who followed Mr. Atkinson, took up the Mexican issue and declared that the democrats' intervention came from capitalists who want their property protected. Granting that there had been injury inflicted on American citizens as a result of the intervention in Mexico, Mr. Cunningham pointed out that it had been contrary to the policy of the United States, even under republican presidents, to intervene in Mexico. He said that the democrats were giving support to Hughes and asked why Hughes had not repudiated that support which was an insult to American citizens. He said that the democrats were giving support to Hughes and asked why Hughes had not repudiated that support which was an insult to American citizens.

Mr. Matheson based his opposition to Hughes largely on the utterance of Roosevelt in behalf of the republican candidate, though he declared that the whole he believed that President Wilson had handled the foreign policies of this government ably and well and that he would have done much different or much better with regard to Mexico, he believed. From the standpoint of business he thought that the democratic administration had been a success, but in view of the perilous times in foreign affairs he doubted very much whether the democrats would make a change in its administration.

M. P. Richardson launched into an attack upon Wilson for his Mexican policy in particular. He believed that intervention or some more drastic course than was pursued should have been employed. He cited Cleveland's strong front in the Venezuela case and said that the Wilson administration was a vacillating policy.

Whitehead Scores Democrats. John M. Whitehead in earliest appearance attacked the foreign policy of the government but also much of the internal legislation under democratic rule. He was especially indignant over the Adamson bill, surrender to socialism, sacrificing the country's self respect and degrading the powers of government. He scouted the income and inheritance taxes and the insurance of prosperity for labor and capital alike.

Mr. Aylward in a rebuttal speech devoted much time to a defense of the Wilson policy in the Lusitania case and in regard to Mexico. The Rev. F. H. Brigham was the leader of the program certain business matters of the club were disposed of. J. S. Lovejoy being elected leader for November and S. M. Smith leader for December.

Anna Patten, a Beloit woman, has sued Claire S. Bradley, a Line City dentist, for $1,000 damages and her husband, Otto Patten, has started action for $300 damages based on the allegation that the tooth doctor, in repairing Mrs. Patten's molars, broke out and left a portion of a steel instrument in the tooth and gum, causing her great mental and physical anguish and causing him considerable depression as a result.

Mrs. Patten in her complaint alleges that the portion of the instrument broken off while the dentist was probing in her jaw pierced the nerve and she says the dentist filled the tooth, closing the opening he had drilled. The gum became inflamed, matted, swollen and bled for two months. She claims the dentist kept her in ignorance of the real state and cause of trouble, although he knew the exact cause.

Bradley has filed an answer to the complaint. He denies Mrs. Patten's allegations and demands that the action be dismissed.

Soldier Under Kitchener in Egypt and Austrian Crown Prince Lays Down Sword During War.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Stockholm, Sweden, Oct. 11.—There came to Stockholm a little while ago one of the distinctly unique personalities of the great world war. A man who had lived by the sword almost from birth, but who in the sudden turn of events in 1914 found himself, not a man without a country, but a man arrayed against each other in the bitterest of all world combats.

He had served under the Austrian Crown Prince and had been aide to Kitchener of Khartoum. He had gone into Egypt when Kitchener was there as a lowly subaltern. For twelve years he was a prisoner of the tangled web of the Egyptian war, and he had seen the first and the last of the great battles of the world. He had seen the first and the last of the great battles of the world. He had seen the first and the last of the great battles of the world.

He came to Stockholm from Vienna unannounced and at his own expense. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world.

So Stalin regretfully met the issue. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world.

He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world.

He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. He was a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world. a better death it was the Kitchener I knew at Khartoum." "I lunched with Kitchener," mused Stalin, "as he was due the eighteenth of June—just a few days before the war fell upon us. Yes, we spoke of the European situation at the time, but neither of us dreamed what it all would mean."

JAVA WANTS DUTCH TO AID INDUSTRIES

Looks With Jealousy Upon Japan's Expansion and Seeks Aid of Mother Country.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

The Hague, Oct. 11.—Java is turning its gaze on the enormous modern industrial development in Japan, and asking why, with its 30,000,000 industrious people, it should not be able to do as much. The Dutch Minister for the Colonies charged Henri Hubert van Kool, Socialist member of the First Chamber of Parliament, with an inquiry into Japan's industrial evolution and Mr. Van Kool's report strongly urged that the Japanese government's many-sided activities in encouraging and fostering the large industries shall be studied and imitated by the Dutch authorities in Java.

Mr. Van Kool shows that, while in 1890 Japan's export of industrial products formed 18 per cent of the whole, in 1900 this had risen to 38 per cent and in 1913 to 45 per cent; whereas agricultural exports declined from 61.6 per cent to 57.8 and 36.7.

His main recommendation to the Netherlands government is that a central bureau for native industry shall be established in Java, following the example of Japan, which body would further industrial development by the gathering of data, by subsidies erection of model factories and the like, and incidentally by an inquiry into the possibility of silk culture in the Dutch East Indies.

The theory of racial incapacity of adjustment to industrial conditions has been exploded, says Mr. Van Kool, by the experience with the Japanese. Indeed, regarding conditions in Java and the qualities of the Japanese, "the most docile people on earth," as in many respects particularly favorable to industrial development.

London, Oct. 11.—Is the national English type becoming thinner than it used to be? Professor Keith, before the British Association at Newcastle, said that John Bull is reflecting in his physical being something of the leanness of war-time.

Professor Keith told the Association that the face of the typical Englishman is becoming longer and thinner. London is now full of Colonial soldiers, and, least of all, a soldier and with prominent cheekbones, and the speaker infers that the English type in the future will come nearer in their faces to approximating these visitors than the bluff, country squire, John Bull.

It is pointed out that the typical "City Man" or financial district business man is thinner than the farmer, who is his father. The farmer has lost his plumpness. The retired army officer is a sparer figure. Even the country squire—the last survivor of the old-fashioned aristocracy in England—bears a closer resemblance to Don Quixote than to John Bull.

URCHINS
Urchins grow only in great cities, where there is a lot of dirt. They begin life about twenty-five or thirty years sooner than most of us, and start right off on asphalt instead of elder-down. Few of them have parents, or if they do they do not take them seriously. Their parents are just one or two persons who happen to be around sometimes, but not much, and who take more of their nourishment out of a tin can.

Many urchins know as much at three years of age as a Yale graduate with a mustache, because they have tried life at first hand, without parental interference.

The only thing an urchin can't stand is water in the winter. During the summer months he may try water, off the roof of a red brick barn, but with intentions. An urchin will run from nothing except his life. He will let a wagon wheel run over his leg, he fights with bricks and cobblestones, he expects no softness in the world.

Urchins learn little English except the swearwords; every urchin knows the full set of these by the time he is two, and is versed in craps at three.

What becomes of urchins when they grow up, no one knows, except that now and then we hear some bank president or opera tenor boasting that he was once an urchin—though this is probably an affectation in most cases.

RESUME CLASSES IN BURNED HALL SOON AFTER FIRE IS OUT

State Insurance Department Will Appraise Losses and Insurance Will Be Used for Repairs.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—Due to the efficiency of H. J. Thorkelson, business manager of the University of Wisconsin, the classrooms in the Wisconsin Main hall will be ready for use by the students on Wednesday. The fire of Tuesday, which completely destroyed the come and the portion directly under it was thought by many to have done sufficient damage to render the building unsafe for occupancy. Two lectures were held Tuesday afternoon three hours after the fire, but the remaining classes were dispensed with due to the interference with the ceilings to allow the water to run from the floors.

The loss suffered will total near the $25,000 mark, according to the prediction of the business manager. The portion directly under the dome will not be ready for occupancy for at least three weeks or a month. All of the floors and the ceilings will have to be replaced as well as most of the fixtures.

The students with the ringing of the fire signal proved themselves able to hold their heads and saved a calamity by the experience with the Japanese. Indeed, regarding conditions in Java and the qualities of the Japanese, "the most docile people on earth," as in many respects particularly favorable to industrial development.

As the fire gained headway flames burst from one window after another until the dome was completely enveloped in fire. By some queer trick of the wind the flag pole which capped the dome was untouched so all through the fire the flag flew. The dome fell the old worn flag that has been flying over the university for so long remained fluttering in the wind.

Even when the dome fell the flag never touched the ground. The students grabbed the pole as it toppled over, and the flag is still on Main hall, a bit bedraggled and burned, but still at the top of the university.

The efforts of the firemen to quench the blaze from the ground were futile; the hill on which the university stands is so high that there was no chance to force a stream up more than a few feet. Witnesses report that a number of the men put their thumbs over the nozzles to make the stream shorter, a more rapid fire-fighting. It was only after the fire was attacked from the roof that enough water could be put on the burning of the hill.

At first it was thought that the extra session of the legislature meeting here today might be asked to make an appropriation for the building, but it was stated at the university this morning that the insurance department would be asked to make an appropriation of the loss at once and the insurance money will be used in the reconstruction work.

Insurance Commissioner M. J. Cleary said today that the appraisers for the state fire fund would be on the ground today. He did not believe it would take long to check and see if the state engineer will be immediately asked to prepare plans for repairing the building.

The dome which fell was a part of the old building which was built in 1857 and completed in 1861. It was largely a wooden structure and burned like tinder once the fire got started.

Main hall is one of the oldest structures on the university grounds. It stands at the crest of the hill. Had there been a strong wind, the complete building would have been destroyed. At one time Chief Hevi announced that in his opinion the building was doomed. One thing is certain, the university authorities will come before the next legislature asking for a better fire protection for university buildings.

STATE WILL WELCOME BADGER GUARDSMEN

When Troops Return Big Demonstration Will Show Appreciation and Patriotism.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 11.—Wisconsin soldiers on the border will find lots of folks who appreciate their patriotism when they get back home. Military, civic and commercial organizations today were going ahead to make the return of the boys a local holiday event. According to present plans the boys will be met on their arrival by Civil and Spanish war veterans, who will form an escort to the city to where Mayor Daniel Hoan and other prominent men will deliver speeches of welcome.

Business houses of the city will be decorated in the national colors and several big business houses have already announced they will give their employees a half a day off to celebrate the occasion.

Not to be outdone by the Cream City other towns are preparing to give their contributions to the national guard a rousing welcome and the part electricity played in the war will take a part in the return of the boys. Gov. Philipp is expected to take an active part in the welcoming. It is planned to present many of the guardsmen with medals.

ELECTRICAL EXPOSITION
AT NEW YORK CITY

New York, Oct. 11.—One of the real "Big Shows" of the United States—the Electrical Exposition of 1916, opened in the Grand Central palace here today featuring preparedness and the part electricity played in the war. Some of the exhibits are by the United States Army and Navy. Others showing the purely industrial side of the participation of electricity in war—such as the making of munitions machinery by motors were by private firms. An exhibition feature not heretofore in general vogue is the showing side by side of the most modern electrical appliances and the old of its kind. This graphically portrays the wonderful progress in the electrical field.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

67 DAISY DEAN

Broad, human, sympathetic, lovable, reflected in the soft shimmer of her eyes and her snow white hair, have endeared Mary Maurice to all her co-workers and to an ever-growing host of admirers.

Not only is she the "mother confessor" to all her "boys" and "girls" of the company, who find in Mother Maurice a great wealth of human kindness and tenderness, but on the screen these same heart appealing emotions have registered just as strongly.

Perhaps the studios life of her earlier years was partly responsible for her sympathetic kindness, or perhaps her contact with the world later, in professional life, has divulged to her the aches of the human heart.

Nearly fifty years ago, when her "silver strands were golden," Miss Maurice started her professional career in Pittsburgh in a farce, but gravitated toward a year later, in professional life, has divulged to her the aches of the human heart.

On the screen her smile, radiating her wonderful personality, has made her so beloved as to be called "The Mother of the Movies" and her portrayals in "The Sins of the Mothers" and "The Battle Cry of Peace" are fine examples of her art.

Nat C. Goodwin has formed his own movie company, reported capitalized at $1,000,000, to make four eight-reel features a year. The studios are to be located on Goodwin's estate at San Jacinto, Cal. The first release is expected to be "The Prince of Broadway."

Webster Campbell, has found an avocation. It is golf, and each day when studio duties allow Campbell motors to the links with his prettiest bride, who has Corinne Griffith, of Vitaphone fame.

A "mob scene" was needed for the picture "The Man Who Forgives," an advertisement in a Washington paper brought 5,000 people to the studio, all anxious to see themselves on the screen.

"The Hidden Secret" in which Ethel Clayton and Holbrook Blinn are co-stars, plunges a girl with a past into the heart of a clergyman's family.

NEW MYERS THEATRE.

Two hours spent with a minstrel show is worth a whole barrel of medicine. Hundreds of doctors will give the advice: "There's no use in giving her any more medicine. Take her to show theatre and let her have a good laugh."

To laugh-lovers and laugh-makers is always held out the hand of fellowship. Do you ever see a popular man who does not attract a crowd? The smile seems to go with his job.

Happy Powell with Powell's Peerless Minstrels at New Myers Theatre, Thursday, Oct. 12, matinee and night.

"Popular man." As Josh Billings used to say: "Laughing is the sensuousness of the soul." And Josh Billings literally rolled in laughter.

Because the American people are a laughter-loving nation, the minstrel show will be popular forever. In no other branch of theatricals will you find amusement that appeals alike to all classes of people. The cosmopolitan population of the United States enjoys the minstrel performance together. It appeals alike to the Irish, the German, the French, the Italian and to all other nations. And while facts and a temporary popularity it is pretty safe to say that the final curtain on the American stage will descend on a minstrel show.

One of the most popular of these facts and a temporary popularity it is pretty safe to say that the final curtain on the American stage will descend on a minstrel show.

ICALLY SEPARATED

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Note—Since the following story was filed last night on the friend of Lieutenant Deullin and de la Tour, Deullin today shot down his sixth and seventh plane. Lieutenant de la Tour remains at five.—Editor.

Paris, Oct. 11.—Lieutenant Deullin and Lieutenant Hubert de la Tour, the Damon and Pythias of the French Aviation service, have just suffered the bitter disappointment of failing to bring down together—as they had solemnly sworn they would do—their fifth German aviator.

Less than twelve hours separated the individual exploits of the two friends. Deullin bringing down his fifth German on the evening of August 24 and de la Tour his fifth on the following morning, yet the interval of twelve hours broke the solemn compact which they had been able to maintain from their joint entrance into the French aviation service.

To lessen a little their regret the French government officially announced the heroic exploits in the same communique but the aviators are firmly convinced that destiny has now intervened in their friendship.

Deullin, who is only 25 years old, entered the French aviation service on May 25, 1915, his license being No. 2076, which gives some idea of the number of aviators France has at her disposal.

De la Tour, who comes from an old noble French family, and who possesses a magnificent chateau at Chailus, where Richard the Lion Hearted died, preceded Deullin by a couple of months. Nevertheless the two young aviators were thrown almost instantly together, and unlike Nungesser, who insists on flying alone, they insisted on flying together. Their Damon and Pythias friendship was quickly cemented when in the same flight each brought down his first German airplane. Soon, there followed for each, the second German airplane brought down in a joint flight, and then the third, and then the fourth. By this time the two aviators had flown both at Verdun and at the Somme, and they had solemnly sworn that as in the past their two aviator would be brought down at the same time in a joint flight.

Unfortunately on the evening of August 24 in one of their usual flights Deullin brought down his opponent while de la Tour's got away. Bitterly disappointed, the two men only waited until daylight the next morning before starting to avenge their misfortune. In this flight they only succeeded in finding one German aviator whom Deullin generously let to his friend, and who lost no time in bringing him down. Their disappointment was slightly lessened as they frankly admit the fear they had that their solemn pact can no longer be maintained.

There is only one thing that will assure them and that is that the sixth aviator to be brought down by each will be brought down at the same time in a joint flight. Not only they, but the entire French aviation service is keenly awaiting the moment when this supreme test will come.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I know a very attractive girl who isn't pretty. The boys have never seemed to care much about her, just meeting her. I have had several boys friends over to meet her and I have told them how nice she is. Three of them like her after they knew her and went to see her. I have been going with a boy for over a year that I like very much. He has a friend who does not know any girls here. He is from another state. I had my boy friend over and that girl one night, and both the boys liked her.

Now that girl has invited my boy friend over to meet a girl friend of hers that she told him she would like awfully well. I told him all about it. I feel very badly about it, because she is a girl who has been off to college and I have not seen her since. There is great chance that he will like her. She is prettier than I am and she dresses better and knows more. What can I do to make my boy friend like me as well as he will?

Don't ever bother to introduce the girl to any more of your boy friends. Think what she has done is completely. Your boy friend may not like the other girl at all, and so don't worry until you have to. Be just the same to him and don't let him know you care. It will take a very attractive girl indeed to mean more to him than the girl he has liked for a year. You can gain nothing by reasoning the matter.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I have a bad case of blackheads. What can I do for them?
(2) My boy friend is coming from another town. Should I ask him to stay at our house, or should I let him go to a hotel?

Try the green soap treatment for a bad case of blackheads. It is made from two ounces of tincture of green soap and two ounces of distilled water. Wash with this mixture twice a day, only a few minutes and then wash off with hot water. If the green soap irritates the skin, as it sometimes will, use it every other day, and apply a cold cream. Green soap may be purchased at any drug store. It is not a regular "cake soap"—it is about the consistency of custard. Open each seed case with the point of a fine cambric needle. The hardened mass must be pressed or pricked out. The empty sac of the gland should be bathed with a little toilet vinegar and water, or with a very weak solution of carbolic acid and water. If the carbolic solution is at all strong it will burn the skin badly. Sterilize the needle before using it by dipping into boiling water.
(2) Let him go to a hotel.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am seventeen and I want to go to school with a girl two years older than I am. Would it be all right to invite her?
Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am planning to have a masquerade party at Halloween. I am fifteen. Do you think I am too young to give a party and invite all the young people?
No.

(2) How can I win the friendship of boys?
If you are not too young to have a Halloween party.
(2) But you are too young to think about winning the friendship of boys. You are just a school work play with girls and try to make yourself lovable by being kind and thoughtful to others. The boys will like you when you are old enough to be liked by them.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: When giving a party for your birthday is it wrong to let the guests know you are giving a party?
It is bad taste to let the guests know, because then they will feel that it is necessary to give you a present.

work once you get the habit. It's getting the habit that's difficult. But once you have it, you have elected yourself to a small body of people who are likely to amount to something, wherever they are—the People Who Think.

Household Hints

THE TABLE.
Sponge Cake—Three eggs, beaten one minute; one and one-half cups sugar; beaten with the eggs for five minutes; add one-half cup cold water and beat one minute; add one and one-half cups flour in which stir two heaping teaspoons baking powder and beat all one minute more. Then bake.
Steamed Buns—Take piece of bread dough size of a loaf, add two tablespoons sugar and one egg. Mix dough soft cover and let rise half hour in warm place. When light make into buns and place in well-greased pan. Place over pan of hot water to steam slowly one-half hour. Bake from twenty to thirty minutes in moderate oven.

Clarified Apples—One cup water, two cups sugar, six large tart apples, one-half lemon. Make syrup of sugar and water. Peel apples, cut each in six pieces and cook in the hot syrup until clear. Remove from the syrup and place in glass dish. The apples are cooked add lemon rind and juice to syrup. Boil until thick, remove lemon rind and pour over apples. In peeling the apples, peel and cut them to be a very light yellow in color. If the apples are crowded in the kettle you cannot handle them easily, and it allowed to stand after peeling they will turn dark. This will serve six.

Imitation Lemon Pie—In these days of high-priced lemons, try this imitation lemon pie. One egg yolk, one cup white for frosting, three tablespoons cornstarch, a little water. Put in a cup, all well mixed. Now put in a pan over hot water, one cup sugar, three tablespoons good vinegar, one teaspoon good lemon extract. When this is boiling stir into it the mixture in the cup. Pour into a hot, oiled, browned crust. Put on the frosting and brown lightly in oven. This will make one large or two small pies.

Vinegar Pie—One cupful of vinegar, one cup water, one tablespoon sugar, one heaping tablespoon flour wet with cold water, two-thirds cup sugar. Put flour, vinegar, butter and sugar in a saucepan and stir until melted, then add the cold water. Stir until thick. Have pie tins lined with a rich crust, fill with the mixture and bake fifteen minutes in hot oven. Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff meringue, adding two tablespoons powdered sugar. When pies are done draw them to the door of the oven, spread thickly with meringue and return to the oven until a very light brown.

Tomato Catsup—Eight quarts of strained tomato juice, six tablespoons black pepper, salt, four tablespoons mustard, one tablespoon cloves, one quart good vinegar, one cup brown sugar, one-half teaspoon red pepper, one grated guinea, one half dozen onions, chopped, and taken out before bottling. This must be stirred and boiled slowly.

Spanish Sauce—Fry two tablespoons bacon in cubes and one green pepper (also cut in cubes). Fry five minutes, then add one tablespoon flour, one-half cup water, one-half cup vinegar, one-half cup tomato sauce, one-half cup onion juice, season to taste. This sauce is excellent when used in combination with meat or spaghetti.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.
Grape Juice—This method has proved to be very good and it certainly is very little trouble. It has more of the natural flavor than the usual method. Put one cup of washed, stemmed whole grapes into a quart mason jar, add three-fourths cup granulated sugar, then fill jar to the top with boiling water and seal tight. To prevent cracking jars, place them in pan of hot water when filling. Ready for use after a few weeks.

Cucumber Pickles—Select one peck of small fresh cucumbers of uniform size. Wash in cold water. Place in crock and add one cup salt with cold water to cover. Let stand four hours. Drain from brine and scald cucumbers in a weak vinegar. Drain and pack either in crocks or mason jars. Boil together the following: one gallon vinegar, one cup brown sugar, two tablespoons peppercorns, two tablespoons allspice, one tablespoon cloves, one ounce cinnamon. Pour this over the cucumbers and seal.

LITTLE GIRL NEARLY DIES SAVING DOG IN STREET CAR'S PATH.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
West Allis, Wis., Oct. 11.—Yelling "save my dog, save my dog," a 12 year old girl hurried herself in front of a street car here and grabbed the animal by the tail and held it, while an excited motorist threw on the brakes and brought the car to a stop a few feet from where the girl and her pet lay on the tracks.

"Faulty Nutrition and Elimination"—these are the cause of the most of the ailments that afflict human beings. Too much indigestible food and lack of power to throw off the poisons that come from indigestion—these lead to a long line of distressing disorders. Avoid them by eating Shredded Wheat Biscuit—a simple, elemental food that contains all the body-building material in the whole wheat grain, including the bran coat which keeps the intestinal tract healthy and clean. Delicious for any meal with sliced peaches or other fruits. Made at Niagara Falls, N.Y.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

CUTTING A BONE OUT OF THE NOSE.

One can gain a lot by reading a hundred letters a day. For instance, it had always been our notion that when a patient survived an operation for, say, appendicitis, and his accounting left the hospital a little pale and bent, but still that his life thereafter was one continuous round of health. Not so. Our correspondence has taught us differently. About thirty per cent of such operations, we conclude, leave some after-trouble which the surgeon never hears anything about.

Thousands of victims of hypertrophic rhinitis (chronic nasal catarrh) have "a bone cut out of the nose" to relieve obstruction to breathing or other symptoms. The nose and throat specialist removes some turbinate bone out of the nose with as little compunction as the conductor feels in punching you. The result is always a cure, nearly always 100 per cent satisfactory—to the surgeon. The patient survives, breathes freely once more, pays his score and departs "cured." Overheating of apartments, the original trouble remains or becomes worse in the course of months. Why? Because the original causes are still active. Why remain they active? Because the specialist fails to advise the patient how to live in order to avoid those causes.

What are the original causes of hypertrophy or thickening of the turbinates or bony or spongy bodies of the nose? The same as the common causes of common so-called "catarrh" of the nose. They are: (1) the temperature of your living room, work room, bedroom, church, theater or other place of occupancy is above 65° and below 70°; (2) the air is dry; (3) the patient has a cold; (4) the patient has a sinusitis; (5) the patient has a chronic infection; (6) the patient has a chronic infection; (7) the patient has a chronic infection; (8) the patient has a chronic infection; (9) the patient has a chronic infection; Opium-Eating an Old Vice. Opium-taking, or opium-eating, is a very old vice. Without having been back to its use in those times which so many writers and speakers refer to as classic times, it is interesting to recall that in the time of Thomas De Quincey the opium habit was extensive in England—that is, it was extensive in the word of Dr. Quincey, who should have had an intimate knowledge of this subject, be taken at its face value, and most men are certainly willing to accept that writer's word on this subject.

The Lone Star Ranger

A Romance of the Border

The moon slipped to the west. Shadows of trees and crags now crossed to the other side of him. The stars dimmed. Then he was out of the rocks, with the dim trail pale at his feet. Mounting Bullet, he made short work of the long slope and the foothills and the rolling land leading down to Ord. The little outlaw camp, with its shacks and cabins and row of houses, lay silent and dark under the palling moon. Duane passed by on the lower trail, headed into the road, and put Bullet to a gallop. He watched the dying moon, the waning stars, and the east. He had time to spare, so he saved the horse. Knell would be leaving the rendezvous about the time Duane turned back toward Ord. Between noon and sunset they would meet.

The night wore on. The moon sank behind low mountains in the west. The stars brightened for a while, then faded. Gray gloom enveloped the world, thickened, lay like smoke over the road. Then shade by shade it lightened, until through the transparent obscurity shone a dim light.

Duane reached Bradford before dawn. He dismounted some distance from the tracks, tied his horse, and then crossed over to the station. He heard the clicking of the telegraph instrument, and it thrilled him. An operator sat inside reading. When Duane tapped on the window he looked up with startled glance, then went swiftly to unlock the door.

"Hello. Give me paper and pencil. Quick," whispered Duane.

With trembling hands the operator complied. Duane wrote out the message he had carefully composed.

"Send this—repeat it to make sure—then keep mum. I'll see you again. Good-by."

The operator stared, but did not speak a word.

Duane left as stealthily and swiftly as he had come. He walked his horse a couple of miles back on the road and then rested him till break of day.

When Duane swung into the wide, grassy square on the outskirts of Ord he saw a bunch of saddled horses hitched in front of the tavern. He knew what that meant. Luck still favored him. If it would only hold! But he could ask no more. The rest was a matter of how greatly he could make his power felt. An open conflict against odds lay in the balance. That would be fatal to him, and to avoid it he had to trust to his name and a presence he must make terrible. He knew outlaws. He knew what qualities held them. He knew what to exaggerate.

There was not an outlaw in sight. The dusty horses had covered distance that morning. As Duane dismounted he heard loud, angry voices inside the tavern. He removed coat and vest, turned over the pommel. He packed two guns one belted high on the left hip, the other one swinging low on the right side. He neither looked nor listened, but boldly pushed the door and stepped inside.

The big room was full of men, and every face pivoted toward him. Knell's pale face flashed into Duane's swift sight; then Boldt's, then Blossom Kane's, then Panhandle Smith's, then Fletcher's, then others that were familiar and last that of Poggin. Though Duane had never seen Poggin or heard him described, he knew him. For he saw a face that was a record of great and evil deeds.

There was absolute silence. The outlaws were lined back of a long table upon which were papers, stacks of silver coin, a bundle of bills, and a huge gold-mounted gun.

"Are you gents lookin' for me?" asked Duane. He gave his voice all the ringing force and power of which he was capable. And he stepped back, free of anything, with the outlaws all before him.

Knell stood quivering, but his face might have been a mask. The other outlaws looked from him to Duane. Jim Fletcher hung up his hands. "My Gawd, Dodge, what'd you bust in here fer?" he said, plaintively, and slowly stammered forward. His action

"Are You Gents Looking for Me?" was that of a man true to himself. He meant he had been sponsor for Duane and now he would stand by him.

"Back, Fletcher!" called Duane, and his voice made the outlaw jump.

"Hold on, Dodge, an' you-all, everybody," said Fletcher. "Let me talk, seah! I'm in the wrong here."

His persuasions did not cease the strain.

"Go ahead, Talk," said Poggin. Fletcher turned to Duane. "Pard, I'm takin' it on myself that you meet enemies here when I swore you'd meet friends. It's my fault. I'll stand by you if you let me."

"No, Jim," replied Duane. "But what'd you come fer without the signal?" burst out Fletcher in distress. He saw nothing but catastrophe in this meeting.

"Jim, I ain't pressin' my company none. But when I wanted bad—"

Fletcher stopped him with a raised hand. Then he turned to Poggin with a rude dignity.

"Poggy, he's my pard, an' he's riled. I never told him a word that'd make him sore. I only said Knell hadn't no more use fer him than fer me. Now, what you say goes in this gang. I never failed you in my life. Here's my pard. I vouch fer him. Will you stand for me? There's goin' to be hell if you don't. An' us with a big job on hand."

While Fletcher toiled over his slow, earnest persuasion Duane had his gaze riveted upon Poggin. There was something leonine about Poggin. He was tawny. He blazed. He seemed beautiful. But looked at closer with glance seeing the physical man, instead of that thing which shone from him, he was of perfect build, with muscles that swelled and rippled, bulging his clothes, with the magnificent head and face of the cruel, fierce, tawny-eyed Jaguar.

Looking at this strange Poggin, instinctively divining his abnormal and hideous power, Duane had for the first time in his life the inward quaking fear of a man. It was like a cold-tongued bell ringing within him and numbing his heart. The old instinctive firing of blood followed, but did not drive away that fear. He knew. He felt something here deeper than thought could go. And he hated Poggin.

That individual had been considering Fletcher's appeal.

"Jim, I ante up," he said, "an' if Phil doesn't raise us out with a big hand—why, he'll get called, an' your pard can set in the game."

Every eye shifted to Knell. He was dead white. He laughed, and anyone hearing that laugh would have realized his intense anger equally with an assurance which made him master of the situation.

"Poggin, you're a gambler, you are—the ace-high, straight-flush hand of the Big Bend," he said, with stinging scorn. "I'll bet you my roll to a greaser peso that I can deal you a hand you'll be afraid to play."

"Phil, you're talkin' wild," growled Poggin, with both advice and menace in his tone.

there five minutes—five minutes alive before him!"

If not hate, then assuredly great passion toward Poggin manifested itself in Knell's scornful, fiery address. In the shaking hand he thrust before Poggin's face. In the ensuing silent pause Knell's panting could be plainly heard. The other men were pale, watchful, cautiously edging either way to the wall, leaving the principals and Duane in the corner of the room.

"Spring his name, then, you—" said Poggin, violently with a curse.

Strangely Knell did not even look at the man he was about to denounce. He leaned toward Poggin, his hands, his body, his long head all somewhat expressive of what his face disguised.

"Buck Duane!" he yelled, suddenly. The name did not make any difference in Poggin. But Knell's passionate, swift utterance carried the suggestion that the name ought to bring Poggin to quick action. It was possible, too, that Knell's manner, the import of his denunciation, the meaning back of all his passion-held Poggin bound more than the surprise. For the outlaw certainly was surprised, perhaps staggered at the idea that he, Poggin, had been about to stand sponsor with Fletcher for a famous outlaw hated and feared by all outlaws.

Knell waited a long moment, and then his face broke its cold immobility in an extraordinary expression of devilish glee. He had hounded the great Poggin into something that gave him vicious, monstrous joy.

"Buck Duane! Yes," he broke out, hotly. "The Nueces gunman! That two-shot, ace-of-spades lone-wolf! You an' I—we've heard a thousand times of him—talked about him often. An' here he is in front of you! Poggin, you were backin' Fletcher's new pard, Buck Duane. An' he'd fooled you both but for me. But I know him. An' I know why he drifted in here. To flash a gun on Chesheldine—on you—on me! Bah! Don't tell me he wanted to join the gang. You know a gunman, for you're one yourself. Don't you always want to meet a real man, not a four-flush? It's the madness of the gunman, an' I know it. Well, Duane faced you—called you An' when I sprung his name, what ought you have done? What would the boss—anybody—have expected of Poggin? Did you throw your gun, swift, like you have so often? Naw; you froze. An' why? Because here's a man with the kind of nerve you'd love to have. Because he's great—meetin' us here alone. Because you know he's a wonder with a gun an' you love life. Because you an' I an' every damned man here has to take his front, each to himself. But who's drew we'd kill him. Sure! But who's goin' to lead? Who was goin' to make him draw? Not you, Poggin! You leave that for a lesser man—me—who've lived to see you a coward. It comes once to every gunman. You've met your match in Buck Duane. An', by God, I'm glad! Here's once I show you up!"

The horse, taunting voice failed. Knell stepped back from the comrade he hated. He was wet, shaking, haggard, but magnificent.

"Buck Duane, do you remember Hardin?" he asked, in scarcely audible voice.

"Yes," replied Duane, and a flash of insight made clear Knell's attitude.

"You met him—forced him to draw—killed him?"

"Yes."

"Hardin was the best pard I ever had."

His teeth clicked together tight, and his lips set in a thin line.

The room grew still. Even breathing ceased. The time for words had passed. In that long moment of suspense Knell's body gradually stiffened, and at last the quivering ceased. He crouched. His eyes had a soul-piercing fire.

Duane watched him. He waited. He caught the thought—the breaking of Knell's muscle-bound rigidity. Then he drew.

Through the smoke of his gun he saw two red spurts of flame. Knell's bullets thudded into the ceiling. He fell with a scream like a wild thing in agony.

Duane did not see Knell die. He watched Poggin. And Poggin, like a stricken and astounded man, looked down upon his prostrate comrade.

Fletcher ran at Duane with hands aloft.

"Hit the trail, you liar, or you'll hev to kill me!" he yelled.

With hands still up, he shouldered and bodied Duane out of the room.

Duane leaped on his horse, spurred, and plunged away.

Learning From the Apple Tree. That apple tree is very old, but I never saw prettier blossoms upon it than those which it now bears. The tree grows a little new wood every year, and I suppose it is out of that new wood that these blossoms come. Like the apple tree, I try to grow a little new wood each year.—Longfellow.

ABE MARTIN

Another good way to keep on the safe side is to utterly refuse to comment. Ainsley Tanner is the first to announce the appearance of fall mushrooms and cannot recover.

TO LIVE LONG

A recipe given by a famous physician for long life was: "Keep the kidneys in good order! Try to eliminate through the skin and intestines the poisons that otherwise clog the kidneys. Avoid eating meat as much as possible; avoid too much salt, alcohol, tea. Try a milk and vegetable diet. Drink plenty of water, and exercise so you sweat—the skin helps to eliminate the toxic poisons and uric acid." For those past middle life, or those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation, as backache, scalding "water," or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, "rusty" joints, stiffness, get Auric at the drug store. This is a wonderful eliminator of uric acid and was discovered by Dr. Pierce of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. If your druggist does not keep it send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial package and you will know that it is many times more potent than lithia and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

WOULD TESTIFY.

Green Bay, Wis.—"About ten years ago I got very weak and run down. A friend of mine advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which I did. Two bottles cured me and I have been strong and healthy ever since. In fact, I am never ailing, only with sick headaches, and I use 'Pleasant Pellets' to cure these, which they never fail to do. Dr. Pierce's medicines are the very best for what they are recommended. I advise all weak women to take 'Favorite Prescription'."—Mrs. Emil Servais, 529 N. Madison St.

Dinner Stories

A certain popular young man has a small daughter of four summers. Recently he escorted her to one of the numerous county fairs hereabouts. She became thirsty, and he conducted her to the building in which the women of a church were serving dinners and selling soft drinks. He bought the child a bottle of pop, meanwhile chatting with the group of church women who were admiring the little girl.

When the pop bottle was handed to the tiny miss she sipped at it doubtfully, then tried it again, whereupon her early suspicion seemed to have been confirmed for she piped out, in a childish treble: "Say, papa, this doesn't taste like the beer we have at home."

A farmer lost his barn by fire. They said at the time that it was insured for more than the building was worth and that he was not sorry to see the old shed destroyed. Unfortunately for his hopes, however, the insurance people took advantage of an option in their policy and replaced the barn instead of giving him the money, greatly to his disgust. Not long afterward the traveling agent of a life insurance company came into the village and, among others, solicited the old man to effect an insurance on his life.

"No, no," said the farmer; "I should feel as if I were going to die tomorrow."

"Well," said the agent, facetiously, "if that is the case, take the insurance on your wife."

"You don't catch me there, either," chuckled the old man. "I know the way of you insurance chaps. You would just go and give me another old one even worse than the first."

Shattered Father's Excuse. Little Marie, aged four, had been very much impressed by her mother's discussion of a charge account at one of the local department stores. At breakfast one morning she said to her father: "Papa, I want you to get me a little brother."

Her father answered, "a little brother is very expensive, and papa can't afford to get you one." "But, papa," she answered, "you can get it charged."

Advertising a Public Good

Advertising is a public good—but there are men who deny this, who maintain that it is a public expense rather than a benefit to the people.

Deny, if you will, that in the primordial process of things the HEN preceded the EGG; or deny, if you want to, that the EGG preceded the HEN—but for the love of Mike don't attempt to deny BOTH THE HEN AND THE EGG!

If advertising is a needless public expense, so is soap, a public expense, and so is sugar, and good roads, and telephones, and beefsteak, and newspapers, and libraries, and ignorance.

Everything we now have that lifts us above the level of old Podunk days is a public expense, and the way to get rid of it all is to throw your razor into the ash can, for-swear clothes, bid civilization goodbye, and crawl back in your naked pelt into nowhere.

Right now every person in this country in fair average circumstances is staggering under a load of comforts that would have made Henry the Eighth or Louis the Grand stupid with amazement.

Directly or indirectly, advertising has operated to promote more improvements in the accepted standards of living, and in business, than any other one thing.

Advertising broadens markets, it increases the size of factories, it brings freight cars up to the siding, it enlarges the working force, it boosts up the bank balance, it steadies the market when it wants to SAG, it pulls down the cost of PRODUCING, it cuts out big waste in SELLING, and—it gets the product to YOU, decidedly a CHEAPER and BETTER product, because it is an ADVERTISED product!

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Oct. 11, 1876.—The coldest yet—25 degrees above zero at 7 a. m.

It is a pretty good election which makes both parties feel jubilant.

Cabbage heads by the thousands are being taken to the pickle factory.

Hundreds of citizens kept late hours last night in hopes to hear something definite from Indiana, but went home disappointed. Our telegraphic facilities, for some cause or other, don't amount to much in election times.

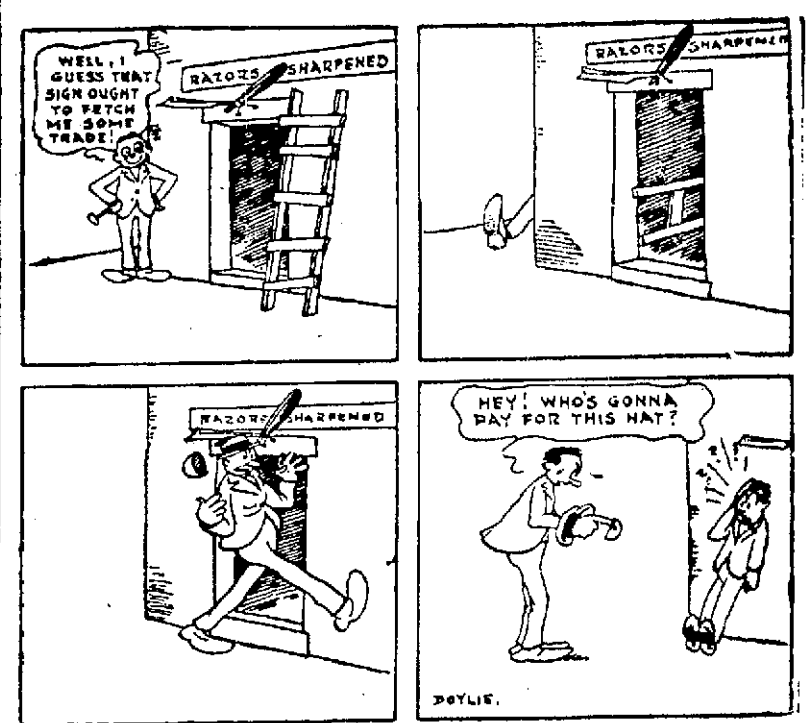

The Johnstown club play the Mutual amateurs tomorrow afternoon at the ball park. The club contains some good players, among whom is a catcher, who they claim is better than any this season.

Whitehall, N. Y., Oct. 11.—The entire business portion of Sandy Hill, New York, burned last night. The losses are estimated at being over $200,000.

A young man in the city recently returned from his wedding tour, and today was asked how he enjoyed married life. "No more single cussedness for me" was his quaint answer.

A bogus dispatch was received by the Democrats today stating that Ohio had gone 18,000 Democratic majority. One of the over-confident members carried it around town reading it to all his friends. A Republican followed him up, and made good wages—$50—in accepting bets on the result.

NOT SUCH A GOOD AD.

Something To Color

Roasting Chestnuts

Find in your box of paints or crayons a very handsome dark green. Now color the little girl's dress, being very careful not to run over any of the spots. After this is dry, mix some very light red (pink) and color the spots. The boy's suit is white. His hair is yellow. The girl's hair is dark brown. Paint the panels of the wall light gray. The fire and fireplace—well, you know just the colors for those.

HARD WORKOUT FOR WISCONSIN SQUAD

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—Dr. Whitlock gave his badge children most one of the hardest workouts of the year this afternoon when he sent them through a two hour signal drill. This drill consisted mainly in the review of the plays which were used against Lawrence last Saturday. The badge coach was dissatisfied with the showing made by the players in the execution of the simple plays, with the result that he has decided to devote his time to the perfection of these formations before any more are given out. Both the line and the backfield failed to carry out his plans in the first session. Lawrence broke through the line continually and stopped the plays before the backfield men were started.

Captain Myers, Cramer and backfield gave somewhat dampened hopes of the badge for a large score against South Dakota State college this week. Cramer and Myers have been on the hospital list for nearly two weeks while Kiechler is in his first game at center against Lawrence. Cramer received an injured ankle when they kept him out of the game Saturday. In the absence of Myers and Cramer who were slated to hold down the ends, Dr. Whitlock has been using Kelly, a veteran of school year ago, but who was out of school last year and Cramer, a member of the freshman squad last year. Kelly is experienced and will perform well, while Cramer lacks variety and is far from being a first class player. The Wisconsin coaches are satisfied with the material, but they realize the need for plenty of practice. The work of O'Neil and Ford has been consistent so far in carrying the ball, but their defensive work has been very weak. Simpson, at his place as fullback is the mainstay of the backfield. Under the direction of Coach Lawrence, due to his working in all the games this year, he has plenty of hard playing to do to replace Simpson or Ford, who are veterans, but the Janesville star is improving each day.

Carl Buck took his men this afternoon after Dr. Whitlock was through with them and gave them a change of drills for half an hour. High line play against Lawrence resulted in numerous gains through the center of the line. Dick Gray and Koch are playing the tackle with Cramer and Hackett and O'Neil at guards. The choice for center in the absence of Kiechler is a big problem for the badge coach.

PUBLIC GOLF LINKS PLANNED FOR MANILA.

Manila, P. I., Oct. 11.—The municipal board, consisting of one American and four Filipinos, has voted to establish a municipal golf course in Manila. The links are to be situated in the bay front on filled-in ground admirably suited to the purpose and will be thrown open to the public. The Filipino, since American occupation, has taken wholeheartedly to outdoor exercise and among the younger set, some excellent tennis, basket ball and baseball players have been developed. These three sports, notably baseball, are played in every nook and corner of the islands. Golf is a new game for the Filipino.

Interesting Game: The seventh grade football team of the Lincoln school defeated the eighth grade team by a score of 19 to 7 at the Lincoln school grounds Tuesday afternoon.

Scrivens Barbers and Janesville Guardsmen bowlers hooked up in a match at Millers last night. The game resulted in a victory for the Janesville artists by 180 pins. MORRIS MILLER

Los Darcy knocked out George Chip the other day in far off Australia. There can no longer be any doubt about Darcy's greatness. He must be a remarkable fighting man. Many of the Australian was given too much credit for beating men like Jimmy Clabby, Eddie McGearty and Jeff Smith. These fighters are all past their prime. George Chip is as good a middleweight as there is in this country, barring possible Mike Gibbons. His one defeat at the hands of Al McCoy was a fluke. He has shown since that he is a great fighter, fairly clever, with remarkable endurance and a damaging punch in either hand. Any believed that he would be accorded every credit for having stopped him instead. It is too bad that Darcy cannot come to this country now, owing to the war, to fight either Mike Gibbons or Jack Dillon would prove his class beyond the semblance of a doubt, and might be the fistic treat of the generation.

If Jack Barry, captain of the Boston Red Sox and former star shortstopper of the great Athletic machine of a few years ago, gets to play in the world's series, Holy Cross Jack can buy a club of his own and have private world's series just for his amusement. Jack is the millionaire among ball players and was born with a silver spoon in his mouth and five dollar gold pieces in his ears. Jack has a little record all his own. He has consumed more world's series dough than any ball player ever lived and Jack is putting away some more this fall. By getting into the divvy in the 1916 series he also will be the first player to share in six world's series. In his five series, not one of which ran over six games, Jack pulled down $14,685.55.

In a match at Brooklyn recently, Uile Wilbert Robinson tried out five of his youngsters toward the end of one of those so tried was Larry (Hack) Miller, a Chicago lad. Larry received a much beating, that he broke all league figures by swinging five war clubs while waiting for the call to make his major bow. The most bats anybody ever saw a player swing before was a total of three but Larry had five, and a kind friend in the coop offered him another. With his arm thus thoroughly prepared, Larry (Hack) started to the plate and very briskly struck out. Larry (Hack) is much more of a natural hitter than a natural whiffer, and will be heard from later.

Witt's work this season for the Athletics has been the talk of the American league circuit, and he is being touted as one of the coming sluggers of the game. Manager Mack expects Witt to be one of the leading batters of the league next season, but evidently intends to play him at second base or in the outfield. It will be remembered that Eddie Collins came to Mack as a shortstop, but after switched about for two seasons he finally was placed at second and became the keystone king in two years.

Derrill Pratt, second baseman of the St. Louis Browns, has been engaged to assist Bill Edwards in coaching the football team of Washington University, a St. Louis institution of higher athletics. Last winter Pratt was football editor for a St. Louis newspaper.

Another prospect taken right off the Washington lots, from under Clark Griffith's nose, is Eddie Tomlin, a high school crack who has been taken on by the Boston Red Sox for a trial.

Bill Donovan, head of the Yankees, believes that he is going to have a pitching staff that will rank with the best of them next year. One fault with the past summer has been that he tried to keep too many pitchers on his staff and could not get the best work out of his men.

Felder Jones says that if Jimmy Austin had not been hurt on July 4 the Browns would have won the American league pennant. That is some compliment, is it not to a player who was offered in trade last spring.

NIGGER HAIR comes only in long shreds, because only long, unbroken leaf is used in making it.

That means NIGGER HAIR is a real long cut.

And NIGGER HAIR is absolutely free from loose, hard stems—they're picked out by hand.

That means NIGGER HAIR is real tobacco.

Those long, curly strands that make such a solid, lasting chew and pack down into your pipe for a cool, slow-burning smoke, caused our grandfathers to name this tobacco NIGGER HAIR.

Made of pure, ripe, mild Kentucky Burley tobacco. And the ageing we give this leaf—up to five years—puts a satisfying relish into NIGGER HAIR that affords lasting enjoyment, all day long, the year 'round.
